He is lived cleanly and is only twenty years old. His natural resources if throw this thing off."

The opinion of the second doctor at a present writing seems to have hit are the mark. I saw Terry several have hit hard, but that he had bruised Johnny up badly and didn't wan; to "do the liftle fellow up too much."

From the workout I couldn't get a line on Terry's ability to take the gaff, for he only boxed quickly and didn't receive any punishment worth mentioning. But he seemed to have he he hooked his left hand suddenly over to burdle with him, and saw him rk. He was clear-headed, and every he the sensible little fellow that he salways been. Physically, he looked od—a bit thin, perhaps on account of king weight, but much better than I expected to find him.

I expected to find him.

I was in the gymnasium of Holder's Haths, where McC overn is ining. Twenty or thirty men came to see him, which was an improve—it upon the earlier training days.

For a while it was bewildering. Thinly clad sprinters were raging around the chader path, big, brawny fellows were hurling big weights across the grass, and the official spokesman was teiling how it happened. All this at the same time. Imagine the plight of a baseball reporter trying to keep score! Kind friends helped out, but the thing which kept my attention was the spirit of the occasion and the sportsmanlike domeanor of the performers. Their hearts and souls were in the work. Money out no figure with them. Think of a man coming all the way from England just to take back—a medal!

The Celtic Park athletes were amateurs, and, the speciators loved and kind of sport. Remarkable as it may seem, the performers enjoyed the games as well, if not more, than did the persons who had paid to see them. Consequently the annual field meet of the Irish-American Athletic Association was a pronounced success.

Nobody around the speciators loved and there was a good-humor'd sally to every aspirant whether detented or victorious. After all was over the victor, the vanquished and the spectator met on a common footing and danced the night (Special to The Evening World.)

added another sport to his varied collection.

"Socker" requires great dexterity on the part of the players, though the mental work and training are not so exhausting as football. The players are not allowed to touch the ball with their hands, neith r must they collide when it can be avoided. They use head, chows, knees and feet in driving the ball about the field. The object is very similar to college football in that the ball must be driven over a gool post.

In England every boy from eight years up plays "socker." They have formed leagues throughout the British Empire, and some of the expert players draw princely salaries. In other words, the sport is conducted very rauch like professional baseball in America.

Star Pugh was in four more brushes and won each. His first race was with Musch, given by J. J. Foody. It was hard fourty to find Musch pushed the Rice pacer clear to the wire.

The second time down the stretch Star Pugh had for company Dr. Modara, driven by Andrew Crawford, and Dan Derby with James Murphy up. Star Pugh soon distanced his rivals and won quite handily. The other horses finished in the order named.

Arthur Lope's trotter Dan and P. Ryan's trotter Rite E, had three spirited races, honors going each time to the former.

Bessie Thompson won two races from Bessie Reid and Antonio, jr., defeated Kitty Wilkes.
